

G. English-Chinese Glossary

The purpose of this English-Chinese glossary, which is arranged in alphabetical order of the English words, is to refresh your memory of Chinese words and the characters with which they are written that have been introduced previously in Basic Written Chinese but which you may have forgotten.

The following information is included for each entry: the English word; the Chinese character(s), first in simplified characters and then, if different, in traditional characters (in parentheses); the Pinyin transcription, printed in bold; the word class of the Chinese word [in brackets]; and the numbers of the unit and part where the Chinese word was introduced (in parentheses). For example:

English	Characters	Pinyin, Word Class, and Unit-Part
hour	钟头 (鐘頭)	zhōngtóu [N] (3-4)

Since each entry includes the number of the unit and part in the textbook where the Chinese word first occurred, you can refer back to that part for more detailed information. Don't try to learn new words from this glossary; keep in mind that a Chinese word means something only in a certain grammatical and semantic context and that English translations can be misleading.
