

D. Character Index

This character index includes all of the 336 characters that are formally introduced in the fourteen units of Intermediate Written Chinese in both their simplified and traditional forms. (The supplementary vocabulary words indicated by the symbols ◆ and ⊙ are not included in this index.) The index is arranged by the total number of strokes in a character, so all you need to do to look up a character is count the total number of strokes. This index will be useful when you want to look up the pronunciation of a character you learned earlier in this volume that you have forgotten, or when you want to find out in which lesson a given character was introduced so that you can review the information about it.

In the character index, the character is listed first, followed by its pronunciation in Pinyin and its character number in this course. Within each group of characters having the same number of strokes, characters are arranged first by alphabetical order in Pinyin, and then by tone. When the simplified and traditional forms of a character are different, the traditional form is enclosed by parentheses and the simplified form is enclosed by brackets. In this way, you'll always be clear about whether a given character is traditional, simplified, or the same in both systems.
